THE Rev. Dr. J. W. Knott was in the city yesterday, the first time he has been able to leave his room since a serious accident which happened to him about two weeks ago, his left arm having been fractured by a kick by a horse at that time. Though still suffering much pain, Dr. Knott hinks he will be able to resume his pastoral work in about a week or ten days. He is much distressed on account of his inability to keep up his appoint-ments. His numerous friends, social and denominational, will rejoice to hear of his sational, will rejoice to hear of hi early recovery.

THE story we publish to-day, entitled "Pangs of Conscience," translated for the APPEAL by Prof. Landsberg, the well known teacher of languages, is of exceed-ing interest and carries with it a lesson. Duty puts upon men, especially in time of war, onerous burdens, but they must be borne at any cost or sacrifice of self or scholar and linguist, in this translation furnishes abundant proof of the extraordinary facility in languages that is the special gift of the educated Russians.
